

Town Council Fills Ann. Appointments

CLEAR UP MATTER OF TRANS- SIENT MEALS IN WAIN.

Following is a record of the proceedings of the Council of the Town of Wainwright at its adjourned regular meeting on Tuesday, January 2nd.

The members of Council present at this meeting were Mayor Foster and Councillors Link, Courcier, McLeod, Welch and Billing.

The motion of adjournment, under authority of which the meeting was held, was read in open court.

Notice was received from the department of Trade and Industry for the Province of Alberta, calling attention to the authority of the town to license bakeries and, on motion, the matter was referred to the By-law Committee for preparation of a By-law and the Secretary-treasurer was instructed to notify the Provincial Department of Trade and Industry of this action of Council.

The Finance Committee submitted a report on transient meals as follows:

This Committee was appointed by Council to investigate the serious discrepancy existing between the amounts reported by the Mayor to have been expended on relief meals in September, October and November, 1934, and the actual amounts which the Town is now asked to pay in connection therewith.

Inasmuch as the Mayor repudiated all responsibility in connection with the extra expenditures referred to, and denied that he authorized same, we made it our first duty to interview the Town Constable, and his statement we report as follows:

"I was present when a resolution was passed by Council on September 4th last to the effect that from that date no meals should be supplied to transients at any restaurant or cafe in Wainwright, and no member of the Council or servant of the Town was empowered to authorize such, and I fully understood the import of this resolution.

"In the face of this I admit that I did authorize the supplying of meals to transients to the amount of between $60 and $70 and that no member of the Council instructed me to deviate from the Council's order."

The net result of this investigation is the fact that the Town Constable accepts full responsibility for the unauthorized expenditure subject of this enquiry, and implicates no one else whatever.

In extenuation he stated that a great many transients arrived on freight cars at a time when business places were closed, and it was not possible for him to buy bread and bologna sausage as authorized by Council, but rather than have the transients stay over in town he took the liberty of having them fed at the cafes so that he could get them out of town on the same freight on which they arrived here.

On motion, this report of the Finance Committee was accepted and incorporated in the proceedings of the meeting.

The Finance Committee submitted a further report, recommending payment of accounts in a total of $230.83 as follows:

Alta. Gov. Telephone	$ 8.77
Rudd & Patterson Ltd.	13.42
Calgary Power Co. Ltd.	168.60

Cowley's Bakery	1.45

Rental P.O. Drawer	5.00
Provincial Secretary, truck license 1935	1.00

Calgary Power Co. Ltd. re Harry Powers	2.94

On motion, the report of the Finance Committee was accepted and incorporated in the proceedings of the meeting and the Mayor and Secretary-treasurer were authorized to issue cheques in payment of all accounts recommended for payment in a total of $230.83.

On motion, N. S. Kenny, Secretary-treasurer was appointed assessor for the year 1935.

On motion, Mr. J. A. MacKenzie was appointed Solicitor for the Town of Wainwright for the year 1935 with a retainer fee of $100.00.

On motion, Dr. H. C. Wallace was appointed Medical Health Officer of the Town of Wainwright for the year 1935 at a salary of $100.00.

On motion, the duly constituted chairman of the Health Committee of Council was appointed a member of the Board of Health of the Town of Wainwright.

On motion, Councillor Courcier was appointed Deputy Mayor for the ensuing three months.

On motion, permission was granted to introduce a By-law appointing a Returning Officer (and, if necessary, a Deputy Returning Officer) for the purpose of conducting the next town elections.

By-law Number 219 was then introduced, appointing N. S. Kenny, Returning Officer, and, in case of necessity, William Pigeon, Deputy Returning Officer.

By-law Number 219 was duly read a first and second time, received its third reading by unanimous consent, was finally passed and the Mayor and Secretary-treasurer were authorized to sign this By-law and to attach thereto the Corporate Seal of the Town of Wainwright.

On motion, Council was regularly adjourned.

Big New Year Ball Ushers in 1935

The Elite theatre was the scene of a merry crowd on the last night of the old year, and 1935 was ushered in the fine style at the annual ball last week.

To the strains of the Mackay orchestra, a crowd almost exceeding the capacity of the floor danced the merry tunes till the witching hour was announced to all and sundry by the whistles and hooters, etc., in the C.N. yards here, when the throng joined in "Auld Lang Syne" in three large circles, and all were soon busy extending greetings and wishes for a better (much better) year during 1935.

To add to the attractiveness of the affair the hall was most elaborately and appropriately decorated for the occasion, and at the supper hour lunch was served by Mr. E. Bonner with a big bang of helpers.

Taken altogether the "annual" ranked well with its predecessors and formed a fitting celebration for the close of the old worrisome 1934 and the optimistic opening of 1935 with all its possibilities.

Here's A Thriller For Picture Fans

Drama, comedy, and action are all interwoven in the M.G.M. mystery drama "Death on the Diamond" which shows at the Elite on Wednesday and Thursday of this week; and in addition three of the winning team are murdered during the playing of the finals for a world's series. Some thriller.

The cast is headed by Robert Young, who is the star of a team for the pennant. Of course, he falls in love with the daughter of the team's manager. Three different attempts are made to cut short his existence—on the playing field, in the locker room, and in the stands, but he still persists in living despite the strenuous efforts of a big gambling ring which are determined to down Young and so cause his team to lose the pennant (this to give the gang a racket on winning money).

Although Young's sweetheart begs her father not to play him in the final game, her request was not granted and for a finish the ace of the team wins out on all sides—the game, the pennant, and the girl.

Hockey Boys Lose to Irma; Beat Chauvin

IRMA 6-WAINWRIGHT 4

On New Year's day the Irma hockey boys took the locals into camp to the tune of 6-4. The game, with the exception of the third period, was very ragged, which resulted in a rather poor brand of hockey. The game billed for 2:30 did not get under way until nearly 3:30 due to the Irma boys being held up, due to the heavy condition of the roads.

Irma started out strong in the first period by taking a commanding lead which read 4-1. The scoring being done for Irma by Frank Maguire on a pass from Bobby Maguire, R. Gaudet on a double shot, by Len Hyde and Len Lawton with Lane getting the assist and Bob Maguire. Wainwright's lone tally came through the efforts of Carl Tury.

The second period saw the locals rearranged which was necessary due to the fact that all the regulars were not present, and proved successful to the extent that they held the visitors to one goal, Martin scoring for Irma with H. Maguire getting the assist.

The third period saw the "wandering Swede" make an appearance in uniform and was used to good advantage on defence along with Len Hyde, allowing the management to keep his forward lines intact, which resulted in the locals outscoring the visitors by a 3-1 count and coming within an ace of tying up the score. Paul Dupre accounted for two of the goals and Ken Tury the other. Lane picked up a loose puck inside the blue line and slammed in Irma's final goal.

H. Schilt handled the ball and handed out penalties to the following: Wainwright—Worton, Hyde, C. Tury, Irma—Lawson.

WAINWRIGHT 10-CHAUVIN 0

On Friday night last, the hockey clubs went out to the rink for a battle with the Chauvin puffers in a snow storm, before a fair crowd, considering the night, and came out on the long end of a 10-0 score. In all fairness to the Chauvin team it should be said that the Wainwright club were an older and heavier club than the visitors.

The locals skated off the ice at the end of the first period with a two-goal lead; Sid Worton scoring on a shot from the blue line and Ken Tury on a pass from his brother Carl from behind the net.

The second frame saw them add three more to their score the markers being Carl Tury, scoring from a face off, Sid Worton on a rebound off a shot by Paul Sturges and Ken Tury on a pass from Roy Toime.

With a five goal lead the Wainwright boys went on the ice with plenty of confidence and slammed in five more counters for good measure. Paul Dupre getting two, Carl Tury one and Roy Toime two. The high score run in against the visiting goalie, does not detract from the work; he stopped plenty of rubber but his defence in front of him was not what it could have been, especially in clearing the front of the goal.

All the visiting forwards found the going plenty tough when they bumped into the local defence made up of Len Hyde, Barney Buckle and Vaughan Ganderton.

OLD-TIMER IS SEEKING LOCAL CORRESPONDENTS

The Editor:
Dear Sir:—I am at a loss to know to whom to write at Wainwright so thought I would write you, as I know that you have been acquainted there for so many years.

We lived in Wainwright about 20 years ago, just three quarters of a mile north on lots bought from Mr. Crawford. I planted fruit trees on one lot, and the children and I planted native trees for a wind-break. We were only there one year and went out to Mr. Curran. I would sure like to know if those trees lived and fruited. Ross Kirkpatrick lived beside us. Are they there yet? I wrote to the P.O. north of town but letters came back.

Mr. Robert Wright (my husband) died ten years ago. I would like to hear from someone at Wainwright—some old-timer. Is Mr. Small still in the furniture business there?

I shall be pleased to answer correspondents.

Thanking you for your trouble.

First Day of Year 25th Anniversary

MR. AND MRS. W. E. WASHBURN CELEBRATE SILVER WEDDING

On January 1st, 1910, amid a crowd of practically the whole town and countryside, there stepped from the G.T.P. train at Wainwright a pair of happy "newly-weds" in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Washburn, and the hearty and sincere welcome which they received on that date has always been their lot all down through the years among us here in town ever since.

Although 25 years may seem a long time to some folks, it is remarkable how quickly it truly passes and leaves lots of us "just as young as ever!" And this can be said, too, for the happy couple who on January 1st last week celebrated the silver wedding anniversary of their nuptial vows.

And despite business worries, frets, depressions, and what have you, Bill (as he is more popularly known among us) has worn exceedingly well—but who wouldn't with such a true helpmeet?

It was at the Presbyterian church at Leduc Alta., that Miss Harriet, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Moffatt, of Owen Sound, Ontario, and Mrs. Wm. E. Washburn plighted their nuptial vows before the Rev. T. T. Reikle, M.A., and following their honeymoon they came to Wainwright where Mr. Washburn was in business with the well-known hardware business which he still continues (at that time Washburn and Miller).

During their long stay here, Mr. and Mrs. Washburn have worked continuously and hard for the advancement of the town, its interests, its churches, its lodges and have both held responsible offices on corporate and other bodies, sports organizations, etc., and have all through the years endeared themselves to the vast circle of friends and acquaintances who on Monday last week accepted the invitation to mark this auspicious occasion, and once more enjoy their hospitality.

A very large crowd of callers and well-wishers wended their way both before and after the wedding to the Washburn home, to extend felicitations, and at the prettily-decorated, candle-lit fest table Mrs. J. Pawling and Mrs. W. S. Clark poured tea, while Mrs. J. Telford with the Misses M. Steel, B. Bowerman, J. Middlemas and E. Cardell made truly dainty waitresses. Miss P. Washburn waited on the door.

During the day Mrs. Washburn was the recipient of many letters and telegrams and other messages of good wishes, as well as flowers, ferns, etc., and to these The Star would add the sincerest wishes for very many more anniversaries from the host of their acquaintances both far and near.

Firearms Owners Are Required to Register

Commencing January 1st, 1935, all persons possessing pistols and revolvers are required to register them, according to a recent amendment of the Criminal Code of Canada, Section 121A which reads as follows: "Notwithstanding anything contained in any section of this Act relating to the issue of licenses for pistols and revolvers, everyone in possession of a pistol or revolver without having registered same."

In Wainwright and immediate district these weapons must be registered with the R.C.M.P. at Wainwright by the owner in person. Where, however, such procedure would impose a hardship on the owner, or by an agent, may be made by mail or by an agent.

Particulars required for registration certificate are: Manufacturer's name, calibre and serial number.

A registration certificate is entirely separate from and does not take the place of permits to carry a revolver. Permits to carry revolvers will still be required.

CALENDAR . . . another year had to drop 11 days out of the year.

We are starting a New Year. Everybody gets more or less of a kick out of the idea that we have put a milestone of time behind us. We approach the New Year full of fresh hopes and good resolutions. But why should we feel that way in mid-winter? It has always seemed to me that the beginning of Spring was the right time to celebrate the coming of the New Year.

Curiously enough, up to less than 200 years ago in England and America and only about 350 years ago everywhere else, the New Year began on the 21st of March, following the custom that came down from the earliest tribal traditions of humanity. The New Year began when the leaves began to bud and vegetation sprouted.

Pope Gregory XIII introduced the present calendar in 1582. All of the Catholic countries, including Scotland, immediately adopted it, and began to calculate the year from January 1st. But it was 1752 before it was adopted by England and her colonies. That was the year that September had only 19 days, for to catch up with the rest of the world England

CHANGE . . . four parts
It begins to look now as if, beginning with January 1, 1898, we would have another new calendar. The great Protestant church bodies of the whole world, the Church of England, the Pope and most of the important national and international business organizations have agreed with the calendar committee of the League of Nations for a new international calendar, in which the year will be divided into four equal quarters, each containing two months of 30 days and one of 31 days, with an extra holiday, or "Year Day" between December 31 and January 1, and in Leap Year another intercalary day between June and July.

Easter would always fall on April 8, and every month would always begin on the same day of the week, every year. New Year's Day would always be Sunday, the Fourth of July always on Wednesday.

FORECASTS . . . on business
Nothing is easier than to make predictions; nothing is harder than to make predictions come true. I have seen a great variety of forecasts for 1935, but most of them seem to me to be inspired by "wishful thinking." Sensible men are more cautious than ever in attempting to predict the course of events. That is why so many of the published forecasts sound pessimistic. Nobody likes to be blamed for having made a rosy prediction that didn't come true, especially if it may have encouraged somebody to take unnecessary financial risk.

Col. Leonard Ayres of Cleveland, who has the highest score of all financial forecasters over a period of years, doesn't think there will be much improvement in business conditions in 1935. Making all due allowance for his "playing safe" state of mind, I am still inclined to agree with the Colonel.

Business isn't going to get any better until there is a clearer definition of the Government's policies that affect business.

COTTON . . . the vote

Walter Lippman, who runs a column in daily newspapers under the name heading as this one of mine, stuck a pin into the Secretary of Agriculture's toy balloon the other day. Washington officials have been jubilant over the 9 to 1 vote of cotton growers in favor of restricting production for higher prices, and keeping newcomers from starting to grow cotton.

"What else was expected?" asks Mr. Lippman, in effect. "Put the same question up to makers of typewriters or ladies' underwear or anything else, and wouldn't there be an overwhelming majority for monopoly and high prices?"

The only kind of a majority that should have a right to vote on any subject which affects the pocketbooks of the entire people, is a majority of the entire people.

JOBS . . . still important

A thousand workers in a woolen mill in my home state of Massachusetts were thrown permanently out of jobs a week two years ago, when the owners of the mill decided to go out of business rather than be bothered by strikes accompanied by violence. It seems to me that the mill-owners did the only sensible thing, so long as they could afford to quit. I am sorry for the workers, who were foolish enough to attempt to intimidate the employers and only forced themselves out of their jobs. But it seems to me the height of folly, in these times of distress, is for folk who have good jobs to quarrel with them.

The Watch Tower

Bible Lecture Contributed by Jehovah's Witnesses

ARMAGEDDON

By JUDGE RUTHERFORD

Armageddon means that the place of assembly of Jehovah's troops, and hence is the name of the place of battle. Soon there will be a great fight by Jesus and His force on one side, against Satan and his force on the other side. That is the final war and in the Scriptures is called "the battle of that great day of God Almighty."

The chief reason for the battle of Armageddon is this: to vindicate the name of Jehovah; and this can be done only by destroying wickedness. Satan wickedly challenged Jehovah to put men on earth who would remain true to Him, declaring that God could not overcome anyone else, and give up his rule among wicked men and angels. Therefore God will execute Satan and all of his wicked host that are associated with Satan, including all those on earth that work wickedness. Many wicked angels, who are invisible to human eyes, are associated with the Devil, and on earth Satan has many representatives who rule the nation under him. Satan's earthly representatives are made up of these elements, according to the Scriptures: religious, political and commercial; and together they constitute the visible part of Satan's organization. All of these selfish and wicked ones hate Jehovah's witnesses; hence Jesus says to these witnesses: "Ye shall be hated by all nations for my name's sake." Satan, and his host, hate everyone who takes his stand on the side of God; hence it is written that Satan is gathering all the nations and rulers of the world unto the battle of the great day of God Almighty with the hope and expectation of destroying those who are on God's side. (Rev. 16:16-17) The prophecy of Zechariah gives a detailed description of the preparation for this great battle, and the book Preparation makes the whole matter clear. It is to your great interest to acquaint yourself with what is contained in these books.

The fighting in that battle will be chiefly by unseen warriors, that is, Satan and all of his host of wicked angels which constitute the invisible part of his army. On earth there will be found on Satan's side that Roman Catholic hierarchy, the Federal Council of Churches, and various other religious organizations which operate for selfish gain, and which will be associated with the great men of commerce who use their money and power to oppress the people, and also the professional politicians who do the bidding of Big Business. Together with this unholy alliance will be joined the police power and army and navy, otherwise designated the "strong-arm squad." All of these will be without faith in God and His King, and they will all bear of their own power. On the side of Jehovah will be the Lord Jesus Christ and His host of holy angels constituting His army. In the Lord's army will be found a little company of Jehovah's witnesses, visible to human eyes, and the only part that they will perform in that day of battle will be to sing the praises of Jehovah and His Kingdom. God will give the command, and Christ Jesus will begin the battle.

The result of that battle will be the greatest trouble ever known since the world began, and the greatest loss of human life. There will be such a terrible slaughter, and the dead will be so numerous, that the survivors cannot bury them. In that battle the religious leaders, and the principal men of their flocks, will find no way of escape, but all of which shall fall and be crushed to pieces. The twenty-fifth chapter of Jeremiah, verses 33-36, gives a brief description of that fight. The wicked ruler of Satan will be destroyed, and that will be the end of all war and tribulation on earth. The new ruler, Christ Jesus, having destroyed the wicked ruler, shall put in full operation His government of righteousness, all to the good of men and to the glory of Jehovah God.

Concerning Christ it is written: "The government shall be upon His shoulder; He shall be called the Mighty Counselor. The Prince of Peace; and His government shall never end." You should learn more about that righteous government and receive its blessings.

Rambling 'Round New York

The most intelligent human being in the world, according to the Standard revision of the famous Binet-Simon tests, is a seven and a half-year old boy in Brooklyn with an intelligence quotient of 230, which is 26 points higher than Einstein's. New York newspapers ran front page the story of the decision upholding compulsory military training in the land grant University of California. My sympathy to the two youths expelled for declining the training, for I went through my military there, like the majority of the others—grudgingly.

In spite of cool weather, horse shoe enthusiasts continue to play in Central Park. They have a club there which is self-sustaining, requiring no financial assistance from the park authorities. It includes croquet and roque.

The husband of the former Barbara Hutton, Prince Alexis Mdivani said, "We don't think it fitting to spend too much in these times." Her birthday party in Paris had cost only slightly more than $10,000. She recently returned to New York.

The new Social Register of New York's elect 40,000 is out, and much to do was made of the omissions such as that of the mother of John Jacob Astor, who has married an Italian boxer, and Rosamond Pincho who is in Hollywood hard work on a picture.

If you saw the movie "Lady for a Day," you'll be interested to know that "Apple Annie" was a character inspired by Helen McCarthy who used to sit all day in Shubert Alley beside

The flight flashed, the audience applauded, the announcer uttered his last syllables, and everyone, clients, actors, advertising agents, directors and master of ceremonies breathed a sigh of relief. "Town Hall Tonight" was off the air. . . . Imagine my surprise when Fred Allen walked into the room where I heard the program and talked exactly the way he does when on the air. He always does. To passengers winging their way from New York, a trans-continental airline recommends reading a book with a title that might have been written with the view from on high in mind. It's Little Soldier of the Plains, by Marvin McDonough, and tells of a two months journey west by wagon train just 50 years ago. What contrast with the luxury of air liners.

Canada Makes Progress Says Beatty

C.P.R. President Reviews Past Year and Finds Evidence of Permanent Economic Improvement in Advances so far made—Predicts Canadian Wheat as Best in the World will find Steady Market.

E. W. BEATTY, C.P.R. President and Chairman of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

THE course of our recovery from the economic catastrophe which swept over the world in 1929 and 1930 has been markedly different from that of any of the previous cases of business expansion in this country. This time we seem to be experiencing a process of slow rebuilding, and, as far as I can see, our permanent re-adjustment of our economic activities to conditions which have been, and are permanently changed. What we are today experiencing is a process of steady, and I hope permanent, growth.

This to my mind would be an entirely normal result of the causes which led to the great collapse of Canadian business. The boom conditions which followed a temporary depression after the Armistice were, as far as Canada is concerned, chiefly the result of forces and conditions in other countries. Actually our productive boom resulted from tangible demand for Canadian products, and from conditions in other countries which directed a flow of capital into Canadian development. Equally the economic collapse of Canada resulted chiefly from forces operating in other countries.

Nothing is more important in our economic life than our great exporting industries. In the case of wheat I have never accepted the alarmist views which have been freely expressed. The world surplus stocks, produced partly by active encouragement of production in many importing countries, and partly by a series of unusually favourable seasons in Europe, seem to be destined to meet the marked shrinkage in production in 1934. While complete recovery of world commerce in wheat must depend on some limitation of excessive economic nationalism, on greater stability of monetary exchange, and on increase in the total volume of other forms of world commerce, I see no reason to believe that Canadian wheat, the best in the world, sold at fair prices, will not find a steady market.

Other primary products, such as minerals, lumber, and bacon are being exported in increased volume and at better prices, largely owing to the Imperial trade agreements of 1932, and the new print industry shows clear sign of recovery.

It is to be regretted that the past few years have seen further increase in the debt of the Dominion, the Provinces and municipalities. Much of our public debt has been incurred for purposes obviously legitimate part of the ordinary government of the country, but much has resulted from experiments in the direction of governmental participation in business. Regrettable as is the loss occasioned by errors on the part of private enterprise, this type of loss is corrected by a reduction in the income and capital holdings of those who finance the enterprises. An undue investment by a public body means permanent charges on the tax-payers. I recommend this thought to those who believe that further expansion of governmental activities is the best method of protecting the ordinary citizen from exploitation by capitalists. In actual fact the safest policy for great capitalists is at present to secure a loan from public bodies and to leave the chance of loss to be carried by the tax-payers.

Throughout the past year the matter of the country's railway problem has received an increasing amount of public attention, and I am convinced that proposals for its solution along the lines of unified management for the two great companies have made decided progress. In all directions the public interest in the railways on the part of the public to enter upon an unprejudiced consideration of the case, and even among those classes whose interests might at first glance seem to be threatened by any such proposals, I discover a growing desire to examine their possibilities and to find out if they really are as dangerous as those who early rushed into print to attack them have so often claimed. This is all to the good. If unified management will not stand up under the most searching criticism, obviously, it should not go forward. But the criticism should be fair and honest, and it should be based upon a fairly sound understanding of railway economics and not upon personal interest or prejudice. I say nothing less than the truth when I affirm that most of the criticism that has come out so far will not stand up before any one or even two or three of the above tests. I shall not further deal with the matter here except to say that I can see no other way than unified railway management in which the country can put a stop to the continual cumulative wastage of vast sums of money, and can safeguard the future of both railways while adequately preserving the property rights of the Canadian people in the Canadian National, and those of the shareholders of the Canadian Pacific.

In a word the C.P.R. proposal for unified management is a partnership between public and private enterprise, with the added advantage of private operation free from political control. Both Canadian Railway systems as well as the railways of almost every modern nation have suffered to some extent from the growth of highway transportation. The general use of privately owned motor cars and an increasing amount of pleasure travel in prosperous times, have led to the construction of a great network of modern highways, which in turn have been used as the right of way for a great number of freight vehicles. To a great extent the operations of these vehicles and their policy in setting their charges, have not been subjected to the same close supervision which public authorities have long given to railway operations and tariffs. In this case also public opinion is pressing for better handling of the situation. The railways do not question the advisability of building good roads, or of permitting them to be used for commercial transportation, but the perfection of the present attempts to proper expansion in every direction. To my opinion, return to the railways at least some of the business taken from them by highway transport and place both highway and rail transportation on a sounder basis.

It is also interesting to note a growing public sentiment in the direction of demanding some contribution to the upkeep of our great and costly inland waterway system from those who use them—especially in the case of ships of foreign registry.

With every correction of these special cases of unfair competition, the Company must depend chiefly for a restoration of its normal position on a recovery of Canadian prosperity in general. The outlook in that respect is comforting. The very careful studies prepared by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics indicate a condition far from as alarming as some authorities would make it.

In this great and scantily populated country we should not, however, be talking only of recovery. Canada should look forward to expansion in every direction. To my mind the policies needed to insure this are very simple. I should list them as: scrupulous care to prevent the debts of public bodies and resulting destructive taxation; and, as a future measure, concentration of our efforts both in public policy and private enterprise, to develop both in volume and prosperity of our primary industries—especially in the agricultural sector, and, as I have repeatedly said, an immediate correction of the hardheaded and shortsighted distortion of transportation facilities.

It appears to me that we can look back on 1934 with some contentment as a year during which we found that the world was not so bad as it had been in the past, and that individuals could still prosper. When I look forward to 1935 and successive years with confidence that under Providence we shall see in them a period when Canada will receive that faith in her future which too many of us seemed to lose, and that we shall again come to realize that all that is wanted to set this country on a forward path of progress are such simple virtues as energy, honesty, and ordinary common sense.

PATHFINDING

Established in 1817, the Bank of Montreal was the first permanent bank in British North America. Inaugurating branch banking in Canada, it was the first bank in the capital of Lower Canada, first in the capital of Upper Canada, and first of the present banks in Bytown, afterwards Ottawa, the capital of the Dominion. It was the first permanent bank to be established west of the Great Lakes and the first to achieve a transcontinental system of branches. It was also the first institution to provide Canada with a domestic currency, both bills and coinage. The first bank to assist in financing the foreign trade of Canada.

The first banker for the Government of Canada, the first bank to help finance the improvement of the St. Lawrence Waterway, through the assistance it gave to the building of the first Lacine Canal. From its inception the Bank of Montreal has held the confidence of the Canadian people. Today that confidence is expressed in the fact that the Bank holds more than one million deposit accounts, equal to a deposit account for one in every ten persons in the entire Dominion. Canadians naturally expect, as the sequel to such a record, that this Bank will retain the spirit of the pioneer in co-operating with the future business life of the nation.

RELAX

I'm shouting to my patrons as they fly over me—as they tunnel under me—I'm screaming "RELAX". And I mean just that.

"Lax" means loose. "Relax" means loosen. The high speed of today is killing people—shortening lives. We cannot keep up the terrific speed without disaster. There must be periods of rest. The old scriptural text, "He Giveth His Beloved Sleep," is a mighty potent five words: there is a volume of health advice embodied in what they express.

Sleep is the most perfect relaxation. The good sleeper may well be envious. I have learned by ample experience that, disaster is just around the corner for my patient, unless the insomnia can be corrected, and NATURAL sleep is best. I need not tell you that, for you know it already.

"Tension" is the opposite of relaxation. High tension, kept up for too long a season, undermines man's power plant—his brain. The man or woman who employs the brain continually, does a flirtation with the very worst form of breakdown that I know of. May I say it, dear reader these days of lightning speed are deadly!

Some people do not know how to relax. With all the sincerity at my command, I beg them to learn the art of "letting go of themselves," particularly after full meals, or when returned from the day's toil. There is every virtue in the short nap at the noon hour, if the working day is a long, busy one. To over-tax a machine wears it out before its "time"—before that in mind always.

One can relax in the rocker with an interesting book or magazine. Get the habit of relaxing; it is worth many tons of drugs. This advice is worth heeding—before it is too late.

NEW SITES FOR SCOTT STATION

Breeders living in the territory served by the Scott Station will be glad to learn that a Percheron Station, a Shorthorn bull and a Yorkshire boar have just been received there. The station was purchased at Bloomville, Ohio, and will be two years old on January 27, 1935. His name is Mel Last 2nd. His sire is Sir Last and the dam is considered to be a very outstanding mare in both size and quality. The grand size of the colt is a famous home "Last", considered to be one of the best breeding Percheron stallions in America. The colt Mel Last 2nd now at the Scott Station took second prize in a strong class of yearlings at the Toronto Royal 1934. Although this colt will not be used for outside service for another year, and only to a limited degree then, he will be an object of special interest to all visitors interested in Percherons, and when mature will no doubt prove very useful in the district.

The Shorthorn bull just received is Neracian Gallant Prince (190886), born August 26th, 1929. He was first and reserve Junior Champion at Springfield, Mass., in 1931, first and Junior Champion at the Toronto Royal, 1931, and second in a two-year-old class at the Canadian National Exhibition in 1932. This bull has come to Scott as a tried, heavy breeder at the Dominion Experimental Farm at Lennoxville, Quebec, for several years, and has left good type calves. As for milk production of dams, out of eleven of his nearest dams, seven dams average 13,567 pounds of milk.

The imported Swedish boar is Viking 969. He possesses a strikingly strong constitution. His hams are particularly smooth and carry well down to the hocks. His strong feet are a notable feature. His spring of rib is a decided improvement in that usually found in Canadian Yorkshires. From all appearances he will mate well with the desirable type of Yorkshires at Scott Station.

COVER CROPS FOR SOIL DRIFTING CONTROL

Cover crops, such as wheat and oats, may be used as a measure of control in districts where farmers are subject to drifting. Perhaps the main objections to their use are that they reduce moisture and hinder weed control, and because seeding is generally recommended about the middle of August when other preparations are under way for the regular grain harvest. On the other hand, wherever used they have been found beneficial.

At the Dominion Experimental Farm at Indian Head, cover crops have been under observation for a number of years. It has been observed that July seeding is a little early and conducive to excessive growth, however, it provides succulent pasture for live stock in the late fall. Observations this year would indicate the advisability of seeding cover crops in strips fifteen to twenty rods wide running north and south. Stripping reduces operation costs and quite fully protects the fallow from very serious drifting.

When seeding cover crops use the same variety of wheat and oats intended for seeding that may well be spring. This is very important especially from the standpoint of registered or certified seed production. One-half bushel of wheat or three-quarters to one bushel per acre of oats have given good results.

A BEEKEEPER'S LIBRARY

With the bees all snugly packed away in their winter quarters and requiring no further attention until next spring, the beekeeper will now find himself with a considerable amount of spare time that may well be devoted to other activities. Many of these idle hours may be pleasantly and profitably expended in reading one or more of the many bee journals, bulletins and books that are now available at reasonable prices. In aid of that knowledge and power, and as a matter of fact, that statement is especially applicable to the beekeeper, for the one that has the greatest knowledge of bee activity is the one that is most likely to become the most successful producer of honey, and one of the best methods of securing this knowledge is through reading. The beekeeper who has no yet started to build up a library of his own is well advised to do so. Such a library need not be an extensive or expensive one, and every beekeeper's library should contain a copy of the "ABC and XYZ of Bee Culture" which is the most complete book on beekeeping available.

SECURITY

Man's security is security. Lack of security at least means worry and may even lead to disaster. The desire for security is so strong that nations are today giving up their political freedom because it appears that for them security lies in some form of dictatorship. The demand for security is greater than that for political freedom.

The security man seeks is against those things which are beyond his personal control—unemployment, old age, sickness and death. Through life insurance we have learned to make economic provision for those who survive the loss of the breadwinner. Through public health departments, we have provided a form of mutual insurance against such diseases as can be controlled by community measures.

Security against disease lies largely in our own hands. We can obtain a large measure of such security by furnishing our responsible health authorities with adequate budgets and then seeing that they are allowed sufficient freedom in spending to ensure the maximum benefits for those who provide the money.

Individually, we gain security against disease by giving reasonable attention to the health needs of our bodies through following the generally accepted principles of healthy living in our daily lives. This implies not so much the avoidance of the undesirable, but rather the promotion of the desirable habits.

The periodic health examination offers security against disease. Most of the diseases which afflict us after middle life are insidious in their onset. By the time they call attention to their presence through symptoms or signs felt or seen by the patient, they are well advanced.

In order to prevent the undermining of health and the firm establishment of chronic disease, or the fatal grasp of some progressive malady, early discovery with early treatment is essential. The periodic health examination offers an opportunity for the examining doctor to find the earliest signs of abnormal conditions. It is in these earliest stages of disease that medicine has the most to offer by way of treatment.

It is not rather ridiculous to ignore the state of your body until it begins to fail you in your needs or until certain parts of it become painful? Is it not a sensible thing to have your body checked over periodically so as to avoid trouble? Why not attain a greater measure of health security through having a periodic health examination?

TEN GREAT MEN

TEN GREAT MEN

Ten thousand ministers of all religious denominations were asked to name the ten greatest men in the Bible. It was not intended to include the name of Jesus Christ, but still His name led many lists and would, of course, stand first in all.

The second name in order of the number of votes is that of St. Paul; the next is Moses, and the third, David. There are in practically all the lists. After these three the vote is more evenly distributed. The total number of men named is sixty, and some of those that have the smallest number of votes are accompanied by the best reasons for inclusion. From this notable list we select the following names, not in the order of their plurality, but in chronological arrangement:

1. Adam, the first man with conscience and a knowledge of moral responsibility.

2. Noah, the man on whom at one time hung the hope of civilization.

3. Abraham, the prince of pioneers.

4. Joseph, political economist, man of vision and integrity.

5. Moses, lawgiver, creator of a nation, founder of the world's system of legislation.

6. David, shepherd, soldier, singer and king.

7. Jeremiah most heroic of that heroic group, the prophets.

8. Judas Maccabaeus, the rebuilder of a nation.

9. John the Baptist, the herald of the dawn.

10. Saint Paul, apostle, traveller, author and martyr.

The reason for the larger number of names in the Old Testament is doubtless to be explained by this longer period which it covers. The New Testament narrative, from the beginning of the ministry of Jesus until the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, is

CENTRAL BANK OF CANADA

When the shares of the Bank of Canada were placed on sale it was stipulated that bankers or those with banking affiliations were not eligible as shareholders. This was designed to prevent the character of the bank from being changed. No one person could purchase more than fifteen shares. This was designed to prevent a few persons gaining control. The entire stock was bought in by some twelve thousand persons, who paid about five million dollars for it. In the hands of these the ownership rests. For some reason, never successfully explained as yet, it was considered by the Bennett government that it was better and sounder for the bank to be privately owned by these twelve thousand far scattered citizens than for it to be publicly owned by the whole people of Canada says an exchange.

The private ownership of the "capital" of this bank is now exposing its operations to public view. Seven directors have to be elected by the twelve thousand shareholders scattered all over Canada. The voting takes place on January 23rd. How are they going to cast their votes to the general advantage of Canada? They will not know unless somebody tells them, and who is telling them? No doubt states have been formed, but who is forming them? No doubt a caucus is under way in every city and hamlet in which shareholders reside. Many shareholders will seek advice in the branch bank where he or she keeps his or her account. What will be asked from all of them will be to entrust their proxies into the hands of certain persons named and highly recommended by somebody. Proxies will be in great demand by rival candidates for the board.

All this looks like a rather comical procedure in the setting up of a central and dominating bank for the Dominion. The wealth which the nation places at the bank's disposal is enormous as compared with the trifling of five million dollars which the stockholders have put up. It is claimed, however, that as the government names the directors and the deputy names the governors and the deputy names the directors will have no power and the shareholders small profit. The directors of the Central and Supervising Bank of Canada, when they are elected by a mere decimal of the population, will probably give some study to the question of why their influence is to be. The candidate who is elected to imagine that of influence they will have none. They will look into that.

One who is considering everything she owes to this bank and the Star has urged from the first that it is to be the bank of the nation it should be owned by the nation. Instead of that the country is offered the assurance that the nation names the governor and deputy-governor and that those will have power to veto the board of directors elected by the shareholders who have contributed a sweating of five million dollars to the immense resources of the nation the bank will govern and control, including management of the mint.

The injection of a little bit of private ownership little at the start and little in cash paid—so supposed to leave the enterprise. But all that aggressive ownership means is to get one shareholder into this big, unlimited thing—the start and it will not be discouraged as to the rest of it if given time.

Just now the twelve thousand small shareholders are being gathered into neat proxy bundles for convenient handling. Can proxy gatherers choose better directors than could the government of Canada?

ONE OF A GREAT CLAN

The great reception given to Dr. Percy Murray at his arrival in Wainwright, where he is to continue his studies at the Vermilion Agricultural school.

It is far more than that, says the Toronto Star, although these things are elements in it. It is, in fact, an outpouring of public admiration for a class which Dr. Duffie typifies, the class known as general practitioners—physicians who are not "specialists" in the sense of devoting their whole story to one form of disease, but who cope with the whole range of human ailments as these are manifested in the constitutions which they serve.

Many of these doctors are great people, great and self-sacrificing people who go forth at any hour of the day or night in all kinds of weather and fight human ills under handicaps of equipment and environment which the layman perhaps hardly realizes. The reception given to Dr. Duffie are a tribute to this whole class of practitioners as well as to himself. And it is a tribute which deserves to be paid. Few of them are rich or have any hope of riches. Many of them work long hours and all of them work irregular hours. They very seldom refuse their help, no matter how thankless the service, on which they go or how little prospect there is of an adequate fee—or any fee.

They know more of the countryside's intimate history than any other man in it. Their offices are confessionals as well as treatment centres. They carry around with them the secrets that would blast reputations and ruin prospects and seldom indeed is such a confidence violated. They may not know as much about the heart as the heart specialists or as much about the kidneys as the man who specializes on diseases of the kidneys, but they know enough to save lives and prolong lives, and their close connection with their patients and their familiarity with the lives these patients lead enables them, sometimes, to do more effective work than a specially trained man who is more aloof from the everyday existence of those he serves. The general practitioner does, of course, call in the specialist if he thinks that the case demands it and if a specialist is available in his district and if the patient is able to pay the specialists fee. But for the most part he fights out the battle himself, and with a high measure of efficiency and courage.

The "general practitioner," the "family doctor," has been a great figure in the urban and rural life of Ontario and will continue to be. He is more than an individual; he is an institution. And medical specialists, as well as the public in general, are proud to pay him tribute.

BROAD APPEAL DRAMA

FOR WEEK END SHOW

The dramatic talkie "Manhattan Melodrama" which shows at the Elite for Friday and Saturday this week is one of the finest new pictures, with a broad-minded appeal to the theatre-goer.

It is an elaborately-mounted life drama of two men and a woman, and carries a modern romantic touch without it carries intensely exciting moments, with gasps of suspense, and yet is properly lightened in its tenseness by carefully arranged sparkling comedy in places.

The locale of the acting is in New York, and opens with the life story of the two men in their orphaned boyhood days. One of these lads took the wrong path to adult life problems, while the other took the accepted right and honorable way to fight the world.

Some time later in life, the crook brother kills and by a series of clever trickery and the help of an underworld plot manages to outwit his brother who has by that time become State's attorney—the plot being controlled through the girl who has become mistress of the one and sweetheart of the other.

However, it is in the death house at Sing Sing, that the two men re-live their lives over to each other and despite the fact that one then on his way to the gallows through the legal efforts of the other, the finale is not a morbid one, but rather a full triumph of men who stuck to their personal ideals through it all.

NOW SORE THROAT EASED
IN LESS THAN 3 MINUTES!

Rawness, Irritation Go at Once
Note Directions for New Instant Treatment

Incredible as it may seem, doctors are now prescribing a way that relieves raw, painful sore throat in as little as 2 to 3 minutes!

All you do is crush and stir 3 Aspirin tablets in 1/2 glass of water and gargle with it twice.

Aspirin tablets disintegrate so completely no irritating particles are left. Results are immediate. At once soreness is eased—discomfort allayed.

Everywhere throat specialists urge this fundamental treatment instead of less effective old-time "swashes" and "antiseptics." Remember this. And when you buy, see that you get ASPIRIN. It is made in Canada and all druggists have it. Look for the name Bayer on every Aspirin tablet. Aspirin is the trade mark of the Bayer Company, Limited.

New Body Lines and More Room in 1935 Ford V-8

THE largest and roomiest cars Ford has ever built, with new body lines of advanced streamline design, are illustrated above in this Ford V-8 de luxe sedan for 1935. Sedan seat six passengers in comfort. Luxurious appointments are new. The eleven body types are all finished in new baked enamel which is said to need only washing to restore its high lustre. Cars are approximately eight inches longer from bumper to bumper and seats are wider. Chassis improvements, including moving the engine forward more than eight inches and new spring suspension, add to riding comfort, especially of rear seat passengers. Directed-flow crankcase ventilation is an improvement of the 90 horsepower V-8 engine.

Dupre Tells of
1935 Ford Models

The new Ford V-8 for 1935, presenting a new conception of beauty and comfort in the modern automobile, was announced today by A. Dupre, the local Ford dealer.

Most striking features of the new car is body lines which are distinctive, modern and a definite departure from any previous Ford design. The new cars are approximately eight inches longer from bumper to bumper. Seats are as much as 5 1/2 inches wider, and front seat leg room has been increased.

The car also embodies a combination of major engineering developments aimed at increasing riding comfort—which has been called the "center-pole" ride. These changes include moving the engine forward more than eight inches over the front axle, a longer front spring placed four inches forward, a straight instead of bowed rear spring, and a total "springbase" of 123 inches on the chassis of 112 inches wheelbase.

The frame is placed lower, and front by 16-inch tires carrying less air pressure are fitted. There are four double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers. Passengers sit inside the wheelbase. The rear tread of the car is more than two inches wider. Numerous chassis changes to give greater ease of control and added stability on the road have been made. Cross-steering, a stiffer frame, a new clutch requiring less pedal pressure, and new brakes calling for less effort to operate, all contribute to these results.

Two improvements have been made in the V-8 engine of which more than 1,300,000 are on the road. Directed-flow crankcase ventilation removes water vapor and other fumes from the engine. Aircraft type connecting rod bearings, of a copper-plated material used previously only on airplane engines, truck engines and expensive custom built automobiles, are fitted.

One new type of body is presented, the touring sedan, with unusually sleek lines and embodying a fitted rear trunk compartment integral with the body. There are eleven body types listed. The following are available with de luxe equipment: Phaeton, roadster, 3-window coupe, cabriolet, Tudor sedan, Fordor sedan, Tudor touring sedan, Fordor touring sedan. The roadster and cabriolet have rumble seats.

A 5-window coupe and the Tudor and Fordor sedans are available without the de luxe equipment.

All models are finished in a new baked enamel, which is claimed to retain its high gloss indefinitely, requiring only washing to restore the lustre. Fenders are colored to match the hood and body in all types. Interior appointments are entirely new. Front and rear appearance conforms with advanced ideas of streamlining.

TRAFFALGAR

Sympathy of the community is extended to the A. D. Wilson family who are quarantined for scarlet fever.

The Gerald School is now open after being closed on Thursday and Friday last, due to scarlet fever in the district.

Mr. G. S. Baker is in Edmonton for medical attention.

After receiving treatment in the Wainwright hospital, Mr. F. Perkins has returned somewhat improved in health.

After a pleasant holiday spent in Edmonton Mr. D. Rattray, jr. returned on Saturday last.

Due to the recent storms the road between F. McLean's and town is now blocked for cars.

The flying sleeper, the surprise fitted with berths for night passengers, is now in use. One can go to sleep and wake up a thousand miles away.

SYNOPSIS: Ellen Church 17 years old, finds herself alone in the world with her artist mother's last warning ringing in her ears, to "love lightly." Of the world she knew little. All of her life she had lived alone with her mother in an old brown house in a small rural community. All her life first as a new baby, then a bubbling child, then a charming girl, she had posed for her talented mother who sold her magazine cover painting through an art agent in the city. Ellen, alone, turned to the only contact she knew, an art agent in New York. Posing, years of posing, was her only talent, so she was introduced to two leading artists, Dick Allen and Sandy Macintosh. Both used her as a model and both fell in love with her. . . . But Ellen, trying to follow the warped philosophy of her mother to "love lightly," resists the thought of love. Her circle of friends is small, artists and two or three girls. Ellen attends a ball with Sandy. While dancing a tall young man claims her and romance is born. A ride in the park, proposal, the next day marriage to Tony, and wealth. But she's "Love Lightly," Ellen told herself. She would never let him know how desperately she loved him, even though she was his wife. Ellen insists upon living in her small room, even though Tony is wealthy. . . . Jane, of Tony's wealthy set, is disappointed in Tony's sudden marriage to Ellen. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"We're modernists, Sandy," she said. "Every night is a night out as far as either of us is concerned. We're not playing the marriage game according to the old sentimental standards, not Tony and I."

Sandy's eyebrows came down, and his eyes narrowed.

"In that case," he said, "I might have dinner tonight—tonight—I'd enjoy feeling like a husband—robbed. I'm sort of beginning to lose confidence in myself."

Ellen felt just a little icy, inside. It was the first time since the wedding that she'd actually made the break—that she'd pulled herself, married, in a position of accepting social favors from another man.

"I'll meet you anywhere you say, Sandy," she told him, "at any time you say."

"Let's make it a real party," he said. "We'll dress, and I'll stop for you at your place in about an hour. I don't suppose, by any chance, that you'd have a cocktail waiting for me?"

"Marriage," she said, "hasn't changed my ideas about that, Sandy. But she was all ready when he came for her in an hour (she met him at the door, he mustn't come up to her so obviously unchanged apartment). Sandy did it very well. It was as if that evening he were planning to auto himself to make the party memorable. They rode in state to one of the larger hotels that boasted a dance orchestra and a roof garden.

They were shot, in the hotel elevator, to the roof garden. They were shown to a table close beside the dance floor.

"It's a nice roof," she told him, and tried valiantly not to tell herself that it would have been perfect if Tony had been the one to hold back her chair, to seat himself opposite her!

"I suppose," said Sandy, as he studied the menu, "that the boy friend is working, or something. Well, more power to him!"

And Ellen echoed.

"More power to him," as she folded her hands tight beneath the damask table cloth, and let her eyes wander across the room. Her glance wandered from table to table, she felt her body stiffen. For there, directly across the dance floor, immaculate in dinner jacket, and with his blue eyes flatter than ever, sat Tony. Tony was alone, either, for Jane in a whisper, devastatingly cut flame-colored, sat opposite him.

"Why," Ellen whispered and her breath came in startled little gasps, "why, there's Tony, now!"

It wasn't that her voice carried. It was that her thought carried. Tony looked up from across the room as sharp as Sandy did from across the table. And then, without a word to the girl in the flame color who sat opposite him, he was up out of his seat, was coming over the polished surface of dance floor.

"Say," he began, "this is a surprise."

Sandy had risen, and was indignantly telling very few for me, tonight. But the kindness of his Vandike beard cut a thoughtful voice from Tony's mouth. The gesture was unbecomingly personal. I can't possibly accept Jane's invitation. I can't possibly go to her party. She was forced into asking me, you realize that. She doesn't want me, why should she want me? It's you she wants!

"So it is," said Sandy. He grinned broadly. "Just what does one do in a situation like this?" he asked. "It's all out of order!"

Ellen was laughing. She tried to make her laugh sound casual.

"One says, 'Hello,'" she said, "and 'goodbye.'"

Tony wasn't as brown as he had been when Ellen first saw him.

"You're all wrong, Ellen," he said. "At a time like this, parties join together. If you haven't ordered, come over to our table."

There wasn't anything else to do, Ellen, as gracefully as possible, and wishing that her dress were pink or blue or orchid or anything but white, rose from her seat, and was escorted by the two men back to the place where the girl in flame chiffon was sitting.

The waiter brought forward two extra chairs, laid two extra places on the table at which Tony and his guest had already started their dinner.

Then the music began. And Tony said, "Dance?"—looking at Ellen. But Ellen wasn't dancing with Tony, not tonight. Dancing with Tony always had a ruinous effect upon her.

"Sandy brought me," she said, "I'll have this one with him."

It wasn't a jolly evening. But it managed to be adequately conversational and very polite. No reference was made to the last evening that the four had spent together.

And after the dinner had been drawn out as long as possible, it was time to go home! There wasn't anything else to do. It was Sandy, not Tony, who decided the situation.

"I think, Jane," he said (they'd never gotten past the first name stage), "that it's up to me to take you home, even though I started the party with another gal. After all, you know, we're on the outside, looking in."

Jane bit her lip sharply.

"I've got my car downstairs," she said. "I can take you all home, you know."

And at last, after detailed directions had been given to the chauffeur, the car came to a stop in front of Ellen's house. The moment had arrived—and Tony rose to it nobly.

"Thanks, Jane," he said, as he helped Ellen out of the car. "You were time to come to dinner with me—and to bring us home."

It would have been all right if Jane had left it that way—if she had just said a graceful goodnight. For a moment one imagined that she meant to, and then she leaned out of the car and her slim beautiful hand rested lightly upon the sleeve of Tony's coat.

"You'll not forget," she said, "that it's my birthday Saturday, and that the crowd is coming down to our country place for the week end. You said you'd be there, you know."

Tony mumbled something. It sounded to Ellen like "I'll remember." And then he was starting to slam shut the door of the car. But his movement was arrested by Sandy's gay, tactless voice.

"Throwing a party," Sandy asked, "and not inviting me! How come Ellen should have somebody along who talks her language. She'd be fast with all of you folks who are Philistines."

Sandy, you see, was assuming the other three, Jane and Ellen and Tony, realized it at the horrible second—that Ellen wasn't a member of the party! The birthday house party to which Jane had invited Tony. Tony evidently, to her mind, was still playing the role of a bachelor!

"Of course you can come, Sandy," she said sweetly, "if you want to. It might be much more charming for Ellen to have one of her own sort. Maybe you have the right idea, at that."

And then the car had gone flashing down the street. Tony, realizing it at the horrible second, that Ellen wasn't a member of the party! The birthday house party to which Jane had invited Tony. Tony evidently, to her mind, was still playing the role of a bachelor!

"Of course you can come, Sandy," she said sweetly, "if you want to. It might be much more charming for Ellen to have one of her own sort. Maybe you have the right idea, at that."

"I guess," he said, "that it's all set! It begins to look as if you're coming with me to a house party. Sandy certainly put Jane in an odd position, didn't he? But, as usual, she came through one hundred per cent."

"Yes," said Ellen, "yes, she did. Jane did come through as usual." She spoke so softly that for all Tony knew she was giving. He didn't know that she had been there a seething storm of anger.

Once, rather a peach, you know? Tony and her tone was not at all cold. "You're making every-thing a thought—ever since Tony went. I can't possibly accept Jane's invitation. I can't possibly go to her party. She was forced into asking me, you realize that. She doesn't want me, why should she want me? It's you she wants!"

"So it is," said Sandy. He grinned broadly. "Just what does one do in a situation like this?" he asked. "It's all out of order!"

Tony answered.

"I'd like, Ellen," he said, answering the first part of her remark, "to make all of life easy for you, if I could. That happens—" his voice also had lost its casual note, "that happens to be the way I care about you." He paused. And then he was answering the last part of what she had said to him.

"But," he added, "I do wish awfully that you'd come to Jane's party. She may have been forced into asking you—You'll honest enough to admit that she was—but the important thing is that she did ask you. Under the circumstances, if you don't go, I couldn't go either, now. And if I don't appear on Jane's birthday, my crowd will think it strange. And, so—" even through the dark Ellen was aware of his smile, "and so it would seem that we're in a box. Not—" the smile had grown into his carefree young laughter, "not that it isn't nice to be in a box with you."

Ellen was turning again; they were getting nowhere. She started to move wearily toward the steps of the house in which she lived. Tony followed her. They climbed the steps together, slowly.

"I don't know what to do, Tony," she said, and her voice was vague. "Don't you think we'd better let it ride—all of this business about Jane's party? Let's not worry about it tonight. Let's just wait and see what happens."

Tony was speaking. "Whether you go to Jane's or not," he said, and his voice was wistful. "I wish we might have a few evenings together. This has been sort of grand hasn't it? 'O me it's been kind of crazy not seeing you, since—" his voice lowered, "our wedding day."

For just one second—one second out of all life—Ellen dared to be eager. She did not draw her hand away, even though it was held so loosely.

"Sometimes," she said, "during the last two weeks I, too, felt that we were silly. I'd be glad to see you just as often as you want to see me, you know." She said the last with a rush. She tried not to emphasize the word, "just as often as you want to see me."

Tony answered very seriously. "That would be quite a lot," he said. "I guess we don't go into that. I guess you understand." He hesitated slightly. "Well, I guess it's goodnight."

Ellen was faltering there in the doorway. She took a step forward. "Tony was very close, it was a short step. But despite his closeness, he couldn't know that she was near to yielding—to making crazy, sweet admissions."

But Tony was moving away from her, down the steps. It seemed as if the distance was automatically widening between them.

"I'd like to," he said, "but I don't trust myself to come up with you. Unless—your invitation means more than I think it does. You must realize why I can't."

Ellen was fumbling with her latch key. She knew in her soul that she must open the door quickly, before she told Tony how much she wanted him to come in, how much she wanted him to trust himself. She couldn't make that move—she wouldn't. He wouldn't be given a chance to hurt her pride, or to break her heart. She must open the door, now—and go inside alone.

In the morning Jane's letter came, as Ellen had known it would.

"My party," read the pseudo-original letter, "is going to be very informal. Just a few of my oldest and intimate friends have been asked down. Of course, I do hope you can come and that you won't find it 'so dull' being among strangers."

As Ellen read the aged words, she was suddenly more bitterly stung than she had ever been in her life. "I won't go," she was storming. "I won't go! I won't go!"

That resolution carried her through the first half of the day. Carried her along until Sandy's note arrived.

"I'm wondering," Sandy wrote, "if I can go up to Jane's party with you and Tony, on Saturday? Drive up with you, I mean. I've decided to accept the gal's invitation. It ought to be fun."

FOR SHARPENED WINTER APPETITES

With cold weather at hand to sharpen appetites, this is the season of the year when all the family will give a rousing welcome to the appearance of the muffins, waffles and griddle cakes on the breakfast menu.

Below is a convenient three-in-one recipe that will be as welcome to the busy housewife as the results of her efforts will be to father and children. Since the recipe calls for bran, there will be a satisfaction in knowing that it will provide a real contribution to the health of the family, for the bran provides the "bulk" every normal person needs to keep his system in good working order.

Three-in-one recipe for Bran Muffins, Waffles and Griddle Cakes

1 1/2 cups all-bran
1 two-thirds cups sour milk
1/2 cup shortening
1/2 cup sugar
3 eggs (beaten well)
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt

Put all-bran to soak in the sour milk. Cream the shortening and sugar. Add eggs, sour milk and all-bran and mix thoroughly. Stir flour with baking powder, soda and salt and add to first mixture, stirring until flour disappears. Bake in greased muffin tins in a moderate oven (425 degrees F.) for 20 to 25 minutes or in a hot waffle iron. Some of the mixture may be thinned out with water or milk and used for griddle cakes. Provides 16 small muffins, 3 waffles or 8 griddle cakes.

Why not start the cold turkey dinner with Duchess Soup—smooth, cream and full of flavor? This soup has a satisfyingly substantial body, but so delicately is it thickened with tapioca that it makes an instant appeal to the appetite.

Duchess Soup

2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon minced onion
4 cups milk
2 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup grated American cheese
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Combine quick-cooking tapioca, salt, pepper, onion, and milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 5 to 7 minutes), and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add butter, cheese, and parsley, and cook until cheese is melted. Serves 4 to 6.

INEXPENSIVE AND LUSCIOUS

Around the Christmas season, thrifty housewives with an eye on the budget are thankful to find dessert recipes which are kind to the pocket-book, but which aren't a come-down from the glories of Yuletide. Here is a dessert in which fruit-flavored gelatin raises the old reliable prune to unaccustomed heights. The family will call for an encore.

Prune Medallion Pudding

1 package lemon or raspberry flavored gelatin
1 pint warm water and prune juice
1/4 cup sugar
Dash of salt
Dash of cinnamon
One-third cup finely cut raisins
1 cup finely cut cooked prunes
1/2 cup broken nut meats
Dissolve gelatin in warm water and prune juice. Add sugar, salt, cinnamon, raisins, and prunes. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in nuts. Turn into small baking powder cans or molds. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serve in slices if desired. Serves 6.

CELERY PASTE SALAD

This is a very healthful salad. Take equal parts of tart apple and hearts of celery, and about half the quantity of green or red sweet pepper, and mince the whole finely. Make a paste from this mixture, combined with dates, raisins, cream cheese or even apple butter, and fill the grooves of celery stalks with the paste. Serve one filled stalk on a crisp lettuce leaf, to each person, adding a mound of home-made jelly on the side, if you wish.

The Canadian pack of canned peas of 1934 is estimated at about 42,000,000 pounds, something like four pounds per annum for every man, woman, and child in the Dominion.

The thoughtful hostess these days gives her dinner guests a choice of coffee, the ordinary variety as well as the modern kaffee bag coffee which is real coffee with the caffeine taken out.

FORD V-8 FOR 1935

The New Ford V-8 for 1935 is the biggest and roomiest Ford car ever built. It is a strikingly handsome car, with modern lines and new, luxurious appointments.

But most important of all it is especially designed to give you smooth, easy riding over all kinds of roads—"a front-seat ride for back-seat riders."

This ease of riding is achieved by the use of three basic principles never before combined in a low-price car.

1. Correct distribution of car weight by moving engine and body forward eight and a half inches.

2. New location of seats by which the rear seat is moved forward, toward the centre of the car away from the rear axle and away from the bumps.

3. New spring suspension which permits the use of longer, more flexible springs and increases the springbase to 123 inches.

The result is Centre-Poise—which not only gives you a new riding comfort but adds to the stability of the car and its ease of handling. You can take curves from seven to eight miles faster with perfect safety.

There are many new features in the Ford V-8 for 1935 which make the car still easier to drive. New brakes give more power for stopping quickly with far less foot pressure on the pedal. A new type of easy-pressure clutch employs centrifugal force to increase efficiency at higher speeds. New steering mechanism makes the car still easier to handle.

The New Ford V-8 for 1935 retains the V-8 engine which has demonstrated its dependability and economy in the service of over a million owners. There are refinements, but no change in basic design. You buy premium performance when you buy this Ford V-8—full 90 horsepower and 85 miles an hour.

We invite you to see this New Ford V-8 at the showrooms of Ford dealers. You will want to ride in it—to drive it yourself. You will find it a new experience in motoring.

FRIENDS OF THE FAMILY

Look at the packages on your pantry and bathroom shelves, and see what a multitude of brand names you recognize. Some of them have been familiar for years. You may have made the acquaintance of others only a few weeks ago. But even these are not suspected strangers. You have bought them confidently because they were advertised. And it is the same with your sheets and towels, your shoes and clothes, your electric appliances, the car in your garage—nearly everything you use.

Advertised products have a standing that commands respect. They are not nameless, but vouched for by responsible firms. The fact that they are advertised is in itself an indication that their standards of quality are strictly maintained, that they represent honest value.

As science and discovery go on, newly developed products are constantly being advertised—ready to help you save money and improve your standard of living. Every advertisement of such a product you read in your newspaper is a letter of introduction to a new and possibly useful friend.

It will pay you to read the advertisements in this paper. By so doing you will meet many choice products—worthy to become friends of the family.

The Grim Society of Termites

Condensed from "The Life of the White Ant" by Maurice Maeterlinck

An Australian planter returns to his home: all is as it was, nothing seems changed or suggestive of enemy occupation. He sits down on a chair; it collapses. He tries to catch hold of the table; it falls flat on the floor. He leans against the beam in the center: it comes away, dragging the whole roof down in a cloud of dust.

A traveller in the Orient relates that returning home he found every engraving that hung on his wall completely eaten away, frames and all, not a vestige remaining; but the glass that covered them had been left in its place, and carefully cemented to the wall so that it would not drop and perhaps make too much noise. One might imagine some trickery, spirit had been at work, as in a pantomime at the theatre.

In reality all this destruction is accomplished by termites, commonly called white ants. These insects, with their self-imposed blindness, have the genius to know how to work so that no one can see them. Their performance also is silent; only a practiced ear can detect the sound of millions of jaws devouring the wood work of a house and preparing its ruin. If it be the gnawing of a joist, a rafter, or a tree, they tackle it from the inside, taking care always to respect the paint or the bark. One is never aware that thousands of phantoms are haunting his house, stealthily swarming in the walls.

Sometimes destruction is wrought with lightning rapidity. In a couple of days termites completely destroyed the beds and carpets of one scientist, while in one night the creatures ate the shirt off the back of another as he lay asleep. He had been studying a nest of theirs and pitched his camp close to it. On the island of St. Helena, two policemen were talking under a huge tree that was covered with leaves; one of them leaned against the trunk, and it collapsed and buried them in the debris.

Termites raided a grocer's store at Cambridge, Australia, and devoured everything: hams, macaroni, figs, soaps, all disappeared. Tins of preserves were scientifically attacked: first they rasped away the covering, then spread a juice over the exposed metal which rusted it, whereupon they bored through without difficulty. They can pierce lead of any thickness. They secrete a liquid which can also tackle glass, wearing it away as though by an emery wheel. Furniture, linens, paper, clothes, shoes, provisions, wood, grass, go the way of all cellulose. Nothing is proof against their ravages.

In appearance the termite resembles a badly drawn ant, with an abdomen striated crossways, soft and almost larval. In spite of its popular name, the white ant is rarely white, assuming rather the color of the earth it lives in. It has neither the sting of the bee, nor the formidable breastplate of the ant, its most relentless foe. Ponderous and devoid of all agility, it cannot escape danger by flight. Vulnerable as a worm, it falls prey to every bird, reptile and insect that craves its succulent flesh.

The civilization of the termite, which goes back some millions of years, is the earliest of any, and although fierce and often repulsive, is from some points of view superior to that of the bee, the ant, and even man himself. Since they feed exclusively on cellulose they find inexhaustible reserves. In common with most animals they cannot themselves digest cellulose, but their entrails are literally packed with protozoa which absorb particles of wood, digesting them and then dying, to be digested in turn by the termite.

In their flourishing republic no loss is permitted; even the excrement itself is used as food over and over again. When there is a dearth of wood, the very walls of their homes provide, as in fairy tales, the nourishment required, for they have been built and plastered with excrement, which is, indeed, the raw material for all their activities. If the matter in hand is the construction of cells, the repair of a breach, the plugging of a chink through which a ray of sunlight might filter—a calamity to be dreaded above all—it is again to this digested cellulose that they have recourse. Combined with the liquid they secrete it provides an unrivaled cement.

So strong is it that it is often necessary to use dynamite to blow up their dwellings. It is difficult to determine the age of these hillocks, for they grow very slowly and from year to year present but little alteration. Constant repairs keep them in good condition, and there is no reason short of a catastrophe why a colony that is perpetually renewing itself should ever come to an end. It is possible that some of their dwellings, called territorialities, date back to immemorial times. Some of them, when gutted, resemble real houses with two or three stories in which a man could easily find a lodging. Sometimes they are as high as sixty feet and are so compact as to remain undamaged by the biggest trees falling on them. They might be heven out of the hardest stone, so defiant is their resistance to the deluges of tropical rains.

To insure defense of its citadels, the group nurtures its soldiers, an interesting type of which is the syringe termite. Where its head should be is a huge, weird apparatus as heavy as the rest of its body, similar to injection-bulbs sold by rubber merchants. By means of these bulbs the soldiers project on their foes from a distance of about seven inches, a sticky liquid which paralyzes them and which the ant, their faithful enemy, dreads above all else.

A few enemy ants sometimes succeed in slipping over their thresholds. Then the soldiers hold off the invaders as best they can, while at the back the workers hastily wall up the openings to every passage. The warriors are sacrificed but the enemy is shut off.

Soldiers, ever heroic, discharge other duties as well. Blind though they be, they are sent out to reconnoiter before the army of workers attacks a tree or a house. They also stand at crossroads as though to direct traffic (during a rush they maintain one-way thoroughfares); they act as overseers among the workers and have even been observed giving encouraging taps to the queen.

Most of the workers are equipped with powerful mandibles, the blades of which cross like scissors. They travel far, under covered ways, to cut up wood. Others stay at home and devote themselves to the washing, stacking and care of eggs, and to the feeding of the queen and king. This melancholy pair bear the entire labor of reproduction. The king is shabby, puny, and fat, always in hiding underneath the queen, who is a white dumpling from which a tiny head and corset just manage to peep out. She lays an average of an egg a second, and it seems impossible for her, during the four of five years of her life, to stop laying, night and day. But the moment her fecundity dwindles, she is deprived of all nourishment. She dies of starvation, her remains are devoured by her subjects with relish, and her place in the royal box is taken by an understudy.

The termite has been able to organize, to make its position impregnable, to multiply indefinitely, to regulate the fecundity of the queen, to increase or restrict the number of soldiers to decide the fate of the creature to be hatched from every egg. They have, despite the aridity and relentless heat of tropical summer, contrived to maintain in their dwellings a strange, constant moisture. They sacrifice sex, wings and eyes for the common good, and little by little have become the most tenacious, the most deeply rooted, the most formidable of all the conquerors of this globe.

Just as cleverly as man, and in some cases with even more cunning, termites had the wit to profit by that unseen power which we call instinct. They preceded man on earth by some million years and have an incomparably greater experience. In the matter of time we are, from their point of view, the last comers, almost infants in swaddling clothes, while they are ancient chemists and biologists from whom we have much to learn.
